What is ethics?

Ethics is a science not about how things are, but about how things should be.

Recommendation CM/Rec(2022)18 of the Committee of Ministers to member States on countering education fraud

Member States should ensure that the ETINED principles are promoted consistently by all education institutions and to all education stakeholders, and that education systems should set the same standards of quality and ethics for all institutions, regardless of their formal status in national education systems.

This should be achieved by taking appropriate measures to provide information on and raise awareness about the prevention of education fraud and, through linking, in theory and in practice, quality assurance and other appropriate regulatory mechanisms, to promote ethics, transparency and integrity in education at all levels in accordance with national legislation.

What are these principles?

1. Integrity
2. Honesty
3. Truth
4. Transparency
5. Respect for others
6. Trust
7. Accountability
8. Fairness
9. Equity, justice and social justice
10. Democratic and ethical governance and management of the education system and educational institutions
11. Quality education
12. Personal and systems improvement
13. Institutional autonomy/institutional independence
14. International co-operation

How can civil society adapt ethics, integrity, and transparency from the education sector?

What are the challenges and threats the third sector faces in terms of ethics, integrity, and transparency?

How educational institutions and civil society can cooperate, work together, in the said areas?

Moving from this “Ethical principles” document to the next “Ethical behaviour
